PAIN POINTS

- Too many tabs:
While booking, clicking on things open too many separate tabs
- Membership sign-up:
Wasn't extremely clear that sign-up was free. Really long term of conditions. What's the catch?
- Security risks:
How to test if booking straight from the website is 100% secure.

4. PROGRAMME MEMBERSHIP

4.1 Conditions of Membership

The Programme is open to all persons who are legally considered to be an adult or have the legal capacity to sign a contract in the Member's home country.

Programme membership is free of charge.

Members have a membership card, sent to them as a physical card or available electronically online, depending on the Member's Status and/or choice. Whether in physical or electronic format, the membership card is nominative and strictly personal. It cannot be sold, loaned or transferred. The membership card is not a means of payment and cannot be used to guarantee a booking. The card lists the Member's name, individual identification number and expiry date of Status (from Silver status – see Article 8 below). The rule is one ALL - Accor Live Limitless membership card per Member. The card may be used only by the Member whose name is printed on the card.

A valid individual email address is required to join the Programme. Two or more Members may not use the same email address. By joining the Programme, the Member agrees to receive electronic communications relating to the operation of, and services offered by, the Programme, including information messages, Points statements, and information regarding the operation of the Member's account. If the Member no longer wishes to receive this information, which is considered essential to Programme operation, the Member shall follow the Programme termination procedure set forth in Article 12.1.

Programme Members accept that the Programme may be modified, totally or partially, at any time. Within a reasonable period of time before their application, Members will be notified of any changes made to the Programme that may substantially modify their rights and obligations relating to the Programme, particularly through information posted on the ALL.com site and/or via electronic communication. Members have the possibility of terminating their membership as outlined in Article 12.1. Participation in the Programme following the effective date of modifications implies acceptance on the part of the Member.

USABILITY TEST

- Were you able to navigate to the booking calendar?
- How many tabs were automatically opened while making your selections?
- Were you able to add extra accommodations to your booking?
- Was the Hotel Membership free?
- How long did the process take?

TEST GROUP

- The test group included a diverse mix of participants across age, gender, ethnicities, language proficiency, and cognitive abilities.
- Most participants were in their 30s, with two participants over 50.
- Participants accessed the site on a variety of platforms, including PC/Android and Apple/Mac.
- Those with limited English proficiency or learning differences required additional support during the usability test.

TOP HIGHLIGHTS

Positives

- Booking feature is easily accessible
- Booking experience was quick, easy and straightforward
- Adding extra amenities to the booking was seamless

Areas of Improvement

- The scrolling calendar feature was annoying to deal with on touch screen devices
- The amount of pop-ups interfered with the process
- The fact that the hotel membership is free could be made more prominent and visible

GENERAL FINDINGS

- Mobile users had mixed experiences—some found it smooth, others struggled with navigation and accessibility.
- Amenity options were inconsistently visible across devices.
- Multiple tabs disrupted the booking flow for several users.
- Membership info was unclear or forgettable.
- Desktop users reported both intuitive and confusing booking experiences.
- Fastest booking was under 6 minutes with clear navigation and currency conversion

CARD SORTING

Participant 1 (Dante M.) prioritized booking above all else when ordering the cards.

Participant visited the hotel's website already confident in their choice and had done prior research.

- Booking was the top priority, with other content considered secondary.
- Participant was still interested in:
 - Viewing available rooms
 - Learning about booking-related amenities
- Lower interest in:
 - General hotel information
 - Non-room photos
 - Loyalty program enrollment

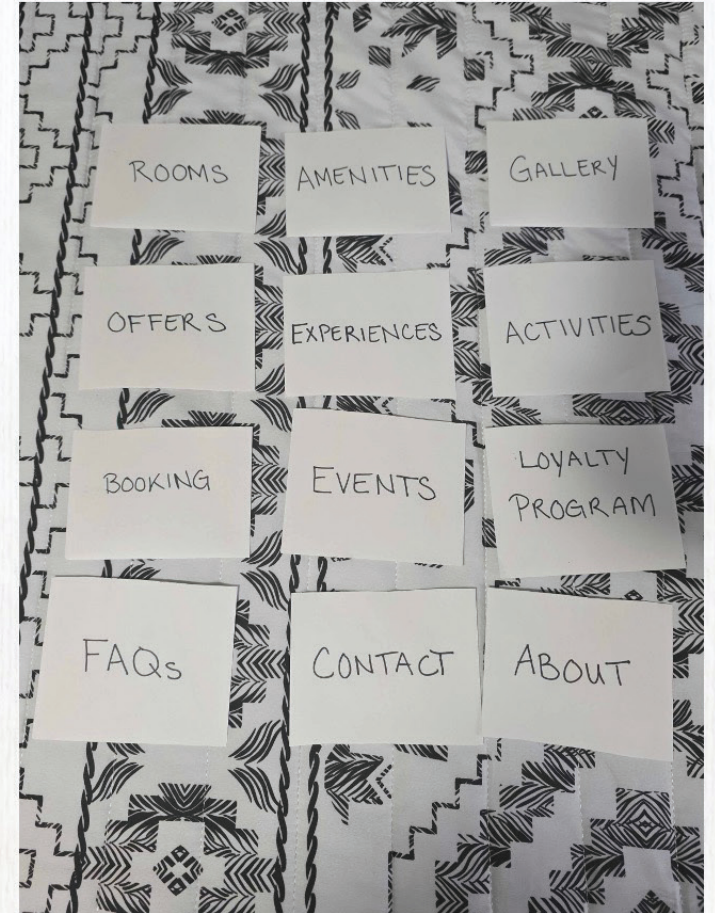

CARD SORTING

Participant 2 (Sebastian C.) placed booking in the middle of their navigational journey...

Participant explored rooms, amenities, galleries, offers, experiences, and activities before booking.

- Visiting the site indicated pre-existing interest in booking.
- Exploration helped build confidence in their decision.
- Lower priority was given to:
 - Hotel background
 - Loyalty program
 - Event details
- These pages were typically ignored post-booking, unless needed or out of curiosity.

KEY FINDINGS

Booking Priority

Participant 1:
Booking was the immediate and top priority.

Participant 2:
Booking came after site exploration.

Site Exploration

Participant 1:
Minimal exploration. Focused on rooms and amenities.

Participant 2:
Extensive exploration. Explored rooms, galleries, offers, and activities.

Booking Confidence

Participant 1:
Already confident in booking before visiting the site.

Participant 2:
Confidence was built through browsing the site's other pages.

Additional Interests

Participant 1:
Low interest in hotel info, photos, or loyalty programs.

Participant 2:
Low priority for extra content; explored only if curious or necessary.

MOBILE EXPERIENCE

- Lena Cadwell

Female; 30

The participant booked a hotel room using Safari on iOS. The process took 10–15 minutes and was described as straightforward, with the booking feature easy to find. The participant liked the simple navigation and helpful info.

- Suggested Improvements:

The participant would have appreciated an improved date-picker when booking which would alleviate excessive scrolling. They also expressed that they would have liked to see more photos of the rooms/suites.

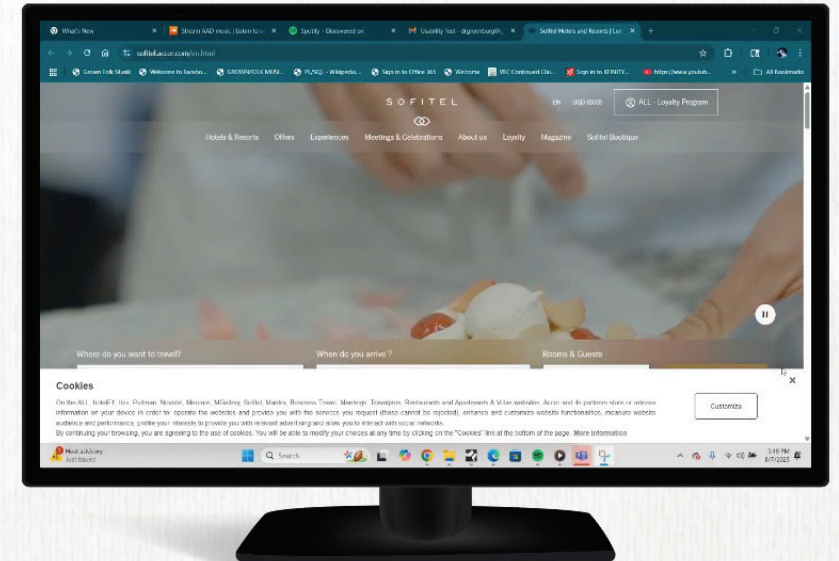

DESKTOP EXPERIENCE

- Malik Santos
Male; 52

The booking process took about 12 minutes on Windows 11 using Chrome. The site was easy to navigate, with appealing visuals that encouraged interest. The participant took their time to explore other pages on the site.

- Suggested Improvements:

Hotel Membership being free was not explicit enough and caused the participant to backtrack.

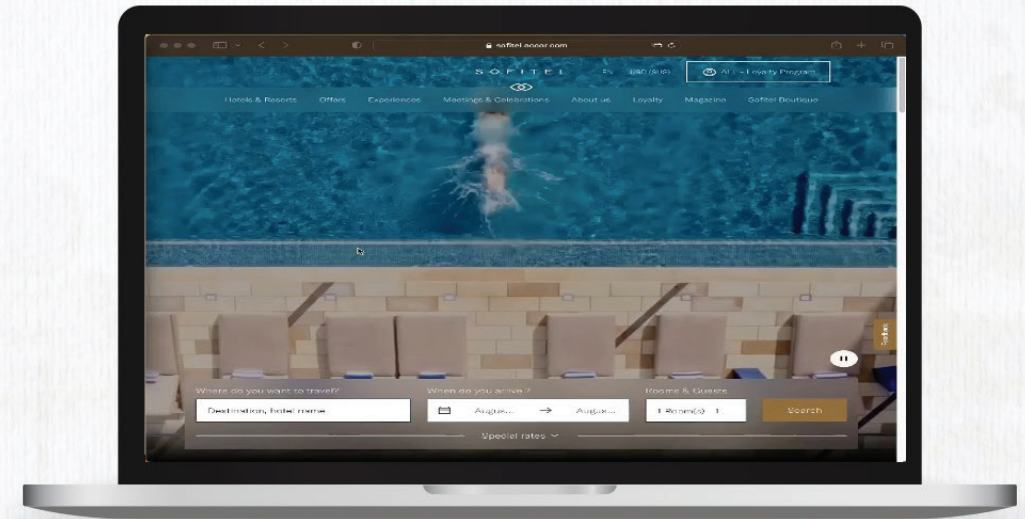

DESKTOP EXPERIENCE

- Dante Mercer
Male; 36

The booking process took about 20 minutes on a MacBook using MacOS Sequoia v. 15.5; Safari. The booking feature was easy to find on the home page. While the site offered good room and amenity options, navigating through them was confusing.

- Suggested Improvements:

The participant did experience multiple tabs opening during their booking experience and was not able to tell if the hotel membership was free.

KEY TAKEAWAYS

- The website has a clean, modern design that conveys luxury.
- The booking feature is easy to find on the homepage.
- Touchscreen users had to scroll and couldn't easily enter dates manually.
- Multiple tabs opened during booking, depending on browser and user actions.
- Hotel membership details were unclear—users didn't know it was free.
- Suggested fix: Add a clear call-out to highlight the free membership.
- Participants wanted more room-specific photos to better compare options.
